Jeremy, you were a great inspiration to me. At Hyde, you always kept it real and let everyone know when things needed to be made right. We had one night in our dorm before spring break, we all got in trouble for a lighter in the wash. You took more physical punishment (squats and leg lifts) than anyone else, even though it wasn't your lighter. We watched many movies together, and you told me a funny (true?) story about Richard Gere. I know you are in a better place, now, tuning muscle cars with the Angels. It is sad to see you go, but I am happy to have met you. RIP

You were one of the first people I met when I first moved here and you helped me out alot.You gave me relationship advice and were such a good friend to me even when you were dealing with crazy Stephen. I remember one time you guys were having a big fight and I was in the front of the house with you and his crazy ass through a stiletto across the room and hit me in the leg lol I had a huge bruise! I'm going to miss you so much and miss our talks. You were the first person to call me after I had my son and we had a long talk. You always had your ups and downs since I met you but you were always there for me when I needed you. I love you and miss you

This is what he was. He wore his heart on a sleeve and was always there when someone needed him. Those memories help me so much.

We used to throw the lacrosse ball back and forth on the campus green at Hyde. We would make trips to the snack store off campus and ride together on the bus to Boston, where you're grandpa once took us out for burgers. The way you watched my dance performance from the side stage in dance class was only with support and intense attention. I am sorry life was so hard and pray that you have found some peace!

I am sitting in my kitchen. I see you -- painstakingly installing pain-in-the ass tile -- for weeks. I see you jackhammering out the old floor and installing the new porcelain floor and the artistic effort you made over three shades of grout. I saved our so private conversations and the intimate things you talked to me about and our verbal contests over whose childhood was the most fucked up. I wanted to help you purge that sense of demeaning that so weighed you down. I meant what I said when we came to court to get you out of jail. We were having a chat and you trailed off, then did not reply and then were silent. But I hear you.
